

Hans in Luck - Fairy tale

Hans: Master, I have served for seven years. I have learned a lot. My time is up; now I want to go home to my mother.

Master: You have served me faithfully and honestly. I want to reward you. I give you this lump of gold.

Hans: Oh. Thank you very much. This makes me happy .Good bye Master.

Master: Good bye Hans

Hans: Hello! What a fine thing it is to ride. You sit as on a chair, you save your shoes and you stumble over no stones.

Horseman: Hello! Hans, why do you go on foot, then?

Hans: I have this gold lump to carry home; it hurts my shoulder.

Horseman: We can exchange: I will give you my horse, and you can give me your gold.

Hans: Okay. This is a good deal. Thank you and good buy. Oh, I am so happy.

Ow. Never again will I mount the horse. Oh, I would like your cow, for one can walk quietly behind he and you have, milk, butter and cheese every day. What would I not give to have such a cow.

Countryman; I do not mind giving the cow for the horse.

Hans: Oh, how happy I am. I can eat butter and cheese as often as I like. If I am thirsty, I can milk my cow and drink the milk. Good heart, what more can I want?

Hans: I am thirsty. I will milk my cow now and refresh myself with the milk.

Hans: No milk? Hans: Hello, look, the cow has hurt me und does not give any milk.

Butcher: Yes the cow can certainly give no milk, it is an old beast.

Hans: It is a fine thing when one can kill a beast like that at home; what meat one has! But I do not care much for beef. A young pig like that now is the thing to have, it tastes quite better.

Butcher: No problem. Hans, out of love for you I will exchange, and will let you have the pig for the cow.

Hans: You are so kind. Thank you very much.

Hans: Good morning

Boy: Good morning. Look, I have a fat, heavy goose for a christening-feast. Oh,.... you have a problem. You have a pig. In the village through which I passed, the people say, that someone just had one stolen a pig. They have sent out some men. If they find you with the pig, you would be shut up in the dark hole.

Hans: Can you help me out of this fix? You know more about this place than I do, would you take my pig and leave me your goose?

Boy: It is a risk for me, but I will do that.

Hans: Oh how happy I am. There is a good roast-meat, then the quantity of fat which will give me dripping for my bread for a quarter of a year, and lastly the beautiful white feathers; I will have my pillow stuffed with them. How glad my mother will be!

Hans: Hello. You seem to be so merry with your grinding.

Grinder: The trade has a golden foundation. But where did you buy that fine goose?

Hans: I did not buy it, but exchanged my pig for it.

"And the pig?"

"That I got for a cow."

"And the cow?"

"I took that instead of a horse."

"And the horse?"

"For that I gave a lump of gold as big as my head."

"And the gold?"

"Well, that was my wages for seven years' service.

Grinder: A real grinder is a man who as often as he puts his hand into his pocket finds gold in it.

Hans: If I have money whenever I put my hand in my pocket, what need I trouble about any longer? But how shall I manage to get the money?

Grinder: You must be a grinder as I am. Nothing particular is wanted for it but a grindstone, the rest finds itself. I have one here; it is certainly a little worn, but you need not give me anything for it but your goose; will you do it?

Hans: I shall be the luckiest fellow on earth; If I have money whenever I put my hand in my pocket, what need I trouble about any longer? I am a Sunday-child.

Hans: Thank you, God. I am free. There is no man under the sun as happy as I am.

Hans: Hallo, Mam. I am so happy. The road to good luck is so easy.

To take to the road – German Custom

- What is it?

Getting out on travel for several years after completing apprenticeship as a craftsman.

-The origin:

It goes back to medieval times and it is still alive in Germanspeaking countries.

-The purpose:

To see the world and improve the skills in foreign surroundings.

-Condition in former times:

The apprentice lived with the master as a member of the household. He received no money but food and shelter.

What does the fairy tale show us?

- Travelling helps people to find themselves.
- Material things don't make people happy in long-term!
- Immaterial values like home, family and liberty are more important than money!

It's the manner of seeing life which makes people happy
