

My experience in Italy

I can say that my experience during this week was the best thing I've ever done in my life! Although at first it was a bit exhausting with the plane, bus and train journey that took almost an entire day, things finally started to be new and unknown to us. Of course, it is not easy to get to a place, especially to a new country, and then “be released” in those lands where you have an unknown family waiting for you, but we soon have the thought that we will live unique experiences.

On the first two days I like to call them, the days of adaptation, where I had the opportunity to get to know my host family better and how things worked in that beautiful land. It was very funny because through mixtures of English with Spanish and Italian I could conclude that my ability to communicate was very good and that I had an excellent family explaining to me everything that was going on around me. I loved it immensely and thank them for the effort they made to make me feel "at house".

On the other days, which later became few, I dealt with a cultural diversity that will always be remembered by me and by all those who have been there. So many differences, not only from person to person but from different lifestyles that we each other! From the beauty of the Italian cities to the friendliness of each Italian who helped us to perceive what was happening, the food (delicious but always the same thing), the stubbornness of each student to find their country better than ours ... These are details that have made this wonderful Erasmus an unforgettable experience!
