

Life is like nature: very complex, but with small details.

When we look at the snow it looks like a simple white cloak. But if we look deeper it's actually an aggregate of small and beautiful crystals. Just like our life ... The smallest things are the most charming.