Exciting day with an unexpected happy ending

The village Almatret

I really liked our Day in Almatret having the nice opportunity to learn about the different possibilities to live a bit more sustainably, like wind turbines, heating water or oil in pipes with the help of mirrors, but sadly also nuclear power plants, cutting your electricity bill in half. Though in the morning it was a bit cold. Furthermore, I also the hike to the different kinds of green energy converters we made, especially because the weather also became warmer and I also liked the lunchtime, because it was a good opportunity to have a conversation with the students of other nationalities and have a little taste of the Catalan cuisine, which was really delicious.

A bit of Lleida

After we left Almatret we had a little walk through the main shopping street to take the bus was also really nice, because you could already see some of the old town.

Football Match

After we arrived in Albesa we went to a football field and had a game between Catalans and Erasmus students which we won, in a sudden death, while the sun was setting. This was really cool, all in all it was a great day.
