

Thursday

During thursday we went by bus to a city called Soufli. There we first visited an environmental education centre. A man who used to work there told us about the place and what activities they had.

Then we went to the old silk factory. The place was a bit eerie with everything left as the day it was shut down. A guide told us about how Souflí cultivated silkworms and supplied the big silk weaving factories in France with silk thread and showed us the machinery in the big hall and the other houses around.

After that we visited a folk art history museum with lots of old clothes and things used in the textile crafts.

We also visited two shops and some of us bought things made of silk. Even more of us bought sweets in the local sweet shop, which had a lot of different kinds of baklava style pieces.
