

The legend about Castle's well

Once upon a time, in the castle of Ogrodzieniec Anselm from Józefów served in the military service. At home, he left his beautiful young wife. After two years of service, he turned to Seweryn Boner to let him return to his native Józefów. He agreed, but only on condition that Anselm first dug a well in the castle courtyard. He started digging rocks enthusiastically but days, months and years passed, and water in the well cannot be seen. Meanwhile his wife was kidnapped and made to a concubine. After many years, Anselm finally saw a mirror of water in the well, but he was already a decrepit old man. Boner, as promised, released him from his military duty and allowed him to return home. However, Anselm was so exhausted that after getting to the surface his heart could not stand and he died. At the same time the water in the well disappeared and never showed up again. It is said that Anselm took it to his grave.
