

LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD

Once upon a time, in a distant land, in a small forest lived a girl with a red riding hood. The Little Red Riding Hood was so innocent and naive. She blew up very quickly what people said. One day, while wandering in the woods, she encountered an evil wolf. The Little Red Riding Hood was scared at first. Seeing this, the wolf said:

W: Don't be afraid, I just want to be friends.

The little red riding hood first looked at the wolf with some suspicion. She was excited that she didn't have many friends in the woods:

R: Really? I would like to be friends with you, too.

The wolf sneaky laughed and said:

W: I would like to give you a gift as a gift from our friendship.

He handed the girl a small cake and continued to speak:

W: This is a very special cake. When you eat, you feel very alive and happy. However, it is very rare and can only be found in this forest. I give this special gift to you as we are friends. But if you want more you have to pay me.

The Little Red Riding Hood was delighted. She immediately grabbed the cake and tasted it. It tastes great, as the wolf said:

R: Thank you my friend.

The Red Riding Hood left and continued to pick flowers. But as time went on, she became less powerful. She decided to go home because she was feeling bad. When her mother saw her like this at home, she was very worried and immediately called her grandmother. Her grandmother used various medicines for the little red riding hood, but she couldn't cure her. The red riding hood, who was sleeping painfully at night, remembered the cake he ate that day. She thought she was her medicine, and she sneaked out of the house. He looked everywhere for the wolf. She finally met him in a cave in the darkness of the forest. The wolf girl greeted:

W: Welcome friend. Why are you here this late?

The Red Riding Hood replied:

R: Kurt, I am very sick. No medicine cures me. Help me. Those cakes were good for me. He said could I have another one?

W: Poor little girl! I would gladly give it to you, but I told you those cakes are very special. If you want them, you have to pay me.

An illustration of Little Red Riding Hood and the wolf in a forest. Little Red Riding Hood is in the foreground, wearing a red hooded cape and a white dress, looking towards the wolf. The wolf is in the background, a large dark grey animal with a white patch on its chest, looking towards her. The forest has tall, thin trees and a ground covered in snow and some dry grass.

The Little Red Riding Hood was scared. Because she had no money with her, and she couldn't ask her mother either. Seeing this, the wolf grinned:

W: You are my friend. If I give you this cake, you owe me a favor. Do you accept?

R: Yeah! I will do whatever you want from me.

He ate the cake immediately and his body got strength. Then he thanked the wolf and went home. But a few hours later she fell ill again. He borrowed money and ate cakes for days. But his illness did not heal anyway. One day he went to the wolf to buy a cake:

R: My friend, I want the cakes again.

W: Now it's your time to pay, little girl.

He put his teeth on the girl and then tied him up. The Red Riding Hood got very scared and started to cry. The wolf's cave was full of bones. The wolf was planning to have the Little Red Riding Hood for dinner. The Red Riding Hood looked for a way to escape and saw a small hole in the back of the cave. She unbuckled her hands with a sharp bone and started running. The wolf is angry:

W: You said you owe me money. You have to pay.

The Little Red Riding Hood knew that she would be caught soon because she was already sick, but she ran with all her might. She met a man with an ax in the forest at that moment she begged for her rescue. Hunter:

P: Don't worry, I'm a mighty hunter, I can easily save you.

The hunter hides the girl behind a tree and fights the wolf. Severely injured, the wolf gives up and returns to his cave:

H: Don't be afraid, you can get out now. Tell me where is your family?

The girl begins to cry and faints after a few minutes. When she wakes up she lies on her bed. When her grandmother sees her waking up, she immediately goes to her:

R: How did I get here? What happened?

G: My sweet daughter, why didn't you tell me she was in trouble. We are always with you. You wouldn't be in such danger if you didn't hide anything from us.

R: Grandma I'm really sorry. Hickup. Sniff, sniff. I thought you'd be angry with me.

G: Don't worry. Everybody makes mistakes sometimes, but everything is fine now. But promise me don't trust strangers again.

R: I promise grandmother. I don't want to get sick again.

Her grandmother patted the girl's back. The Little Red Riding Hood never ate those cakes again and trusted her family more. No matter what, she always remembered that she was with her family.

