

My job shadowing

I started to work on the 16th of July in a shop of a big company of Germany. It's called Lidl. My friend recommended me the job.

That was my first proper work experience in my life but not the last. My main work there was to reload all the products, to clean and sweep the floor. I was working six hours a day. It was sufficient absolutely, I wouldn't work more there. Before I started working my phone I had to give up my phone

My colleagues were usually older than me, they were working in the Lidl as a full time employee.

They have treated me normally, they did help and assist every time in my job when I couldn't find the proper cleaning products, they helped me a lot to learn how to maintain everything in the shop.

There was a dedicated supervisor who was controlling my work. This lady was a real professional, she was in charge of the environment of the shop there. I had a lot of compliments from her.

I'm not sure if that was true, but she said I was one of her favourite student-worker so far since she has been working there.

In the normal working hours my main scope of activity was to reload the shop's products, sometimes I had to lift heavy boxes, sometimes I needed only pack out the Coca-colas but basically it was a non-stop thing because when the customers came and bought something, my job was to check everything and organise it in order. To be honest, this job was decent but not designed for me. I admit to myself, I need to learn more and more because I believe, I can work in bigger companies with better position in the future.

All in all, I liked it but I don't want to work anymore as a sweeper and cleaner, I would like to work more with children in camps and adventure parks for example, however in the Lidl I could learn enough about the idea „how to work?“. From my salary I could buy many things for myself, I could visit the cinema to see some movies with my friends, I went to fashion shops and bought few clothes and shoes.
