Dedicated to Saints Stanislaus and Ladislaus, the church is the heart of Catholic spiritual life in Vilnius, Lithuania

Vilnius, Lithuania

The present brick church was constructed on the initiative of the King of Poland and Grand Duke of Lithuania Alexander I

Jagiellon<sup>[2]</sup> in 1495–1500; the exterior of the church has remained almost unchanged since then. According to a wellknown legend, Emperor Napoleon, after seeing the church during the Franco-Russian War in 1812, expressed a wish to carry the church home with him to Paris 'in the palm of his hand'.

Lithuania.

The coronations of the Grand Dukes of Lithuania took place within its con nes. Inside its crypts and catacombs are buried many famous people from Lithuanian and Polish history including Vytautas (1430), his wife Anna (1418), his brother Sigismund (Žygimantas) (1440), his cousin Švitrigaila (1452), Saint Casimir (1484), Alexander Jagiellon (1506), and two wives of Sigismund II Augustus: Elisabeth of Habsburg (1545) and Barbara Radziwiłł (1551). The heart of the Polish king Władysław IV Vasa was buried there upon his death, although the rest of his body is buried at the Wawel Cathedral in Kraków.

DRAGOBETE:

Seen as the Romanian version of Valentine's Day, Dragobete is celebrated on February 24th. Dragobete, personified as a young handsome man, is the protector of lovers in Romanian folk culture. Around that day, which represents the end of winter, it is believed that birds find their mate and start building nests together. Traditionally, young men and women would pick flowers together in the woods, and upon returning, women would allow the man they fancied to steal a kiss. That would mark the start of their relationship, and bygone times, that of their engagement.

The Bran Castle is a castle in the centre of Romania, 25km southeast of Braşov. The fortress is on the Transylvanian side of the historical border with Wallachia. It is famously known outside Romania as Dracula's Castle. However, there is no evidence that the author of the Dracula novel knew anything about the castle. The castle is now a museum dedicated to art and furniture.

Bory Tucholskie National Park

ANONYMOUS DEC 14, 2020 12:38PM

The area of the "Bory Tucholskie" National Park is located on south edge of historical Pomerania. This area for the first time was subjected to scientific ethnographic research in the forties of XX century. Bory Tucholskie area is particularly strongly bound with Kashubs. The relationship with Kashubs is visible in wood constructions.

Local population has created certain, specific only to itself, regional features of culture. The above mentioned refers first of all to the use of wood as the construction material.
