Portugal's role in the Age of Discoveries

- ▶ The Portuguese discoveries were the set of achievements made by the Portuguese in voyages and maritime explorations between 1415 and 1543, and these resulted in the Portuguese expansion and made an essential contribution to delineate the map of the world.

Vasco da Gama

In the Age of Discovery, he was noted for having been the commander of the first ships to sail from Europe to India on the longest ocean voyage ever undertaken. At the end of his life he was briefly the Viceroy of India.

Age of discoveries

Cristóvão Colombo

Cristovão Colombo discovered the maritime route to the American continent on October 12, 1492.
