

The 500 Years War

In a parallel universe, in the year of 2500, there was a war between the planet of fish and the planet of cats, which was going on for 500 years. They were at war because they wanted to expand their planet and, to do that, they were looking for a planet with the necessary conditions.

After searching for a long time, the fish finally found a planet that seemed suitable for them. It was called Earth. So, they sent some spies (robotic fish) to Earth and, as that planet was already quite evolved and had many robotic things, humans would never suspect of the robotic fish (spies).

As time went by, the fish started eliminating the human race and, eventually, extinguished humans and dominated Planet Earth.

By that time, the cats found out that the fish had conquered Planet Earth. So, they prepared themselves to go to Earth and end with the fish's existence once and for all.

As soon as they reached Earth, cats and fish started fighting. Garfield (chief of the cats) and Tobias (chief of the fish) determined the final battle with the defeat of the cats. This was the end of the 500 Years War and the victory of the fish.