History

→ Jokgu was invented in 1960 by members of the Air Force of the Republic of Korea to promote military bases. Jokgu is very popular in Korea. As interest in Jokgu has grown in America, America and Korea joined forces to form a Jokgu League in 2011.

The Rules

It can be described as a fusion of volleyball and football. The rules are similar to volleyball, but only your feet, shin and head can have contact with the ball.

- Teams are made up of four people on each side of the network.
- Players are allowed three contacts per page with a jump between the contacts.
- The score is counted under the rally points system, where you have to have a two-point advantage to win a game.
- Each of the two teams has four starters and three assistants.

Spielfeld Aufbau

Height of the net is similar to tennis (1.1 meters).

The playground measures 16 x 7 meters.

A game consists of three sets of 15 points each. The ball for Jokgu measures 20 centimetres in diameter and weighs 360 grams.
