International Book Donation Day

On the occasion of the International Book Donation Day, which is celebrated on February 14, the school library, in cooperation with a group of student journalists, launched an action of collecting and donating books among students and staff of the Gymnasium.

The idea was for students and professors to bring the books they had read and donate them. It is a two-week volunteer project that aims to awaken the love of reading and giving books among young people. The book donation campaign was organized as part of the national campaign "Read to Me!" under the motto "I read, I give, I am happy - give your book and make someone else's heart happy".

Many students and staff responded. They brought some of their favorite and most interesting books. When we asked them why they give away their loved ones, the answer was unanimous - we want our peers to get acquainted with the world that these books create. There were various titles and genres, from classics of world literature to science fiction. We also collected a nice collection of children's literature (for those who have younger siblings). Also, history buffs could find something for themselves. In fact, they still can! Many got involved afterwards so the books arrive daily in the library corner dedicated to this mini-project. So the action is still ongoing! If you have not visited the mentioned corner, come to the school library and check! You may be surprised because... you never know what kind of book you can find. You may just find your new favorite book because "books are the glasses through which we look at the world."
