The involvement of early childhood children in the Natural Sciences contributes to: (a) exploiting the curiosity and inner motivation of young children to explore the world around them; (b) supporting scientific "literacy" so that they can explore systematically understand basic functions, solve problems, form a critical attitude and make decisions which support the emergence of science, technology and society interdependence, the development of key competences; (c) the development of a positive attitude towards science, and the awareness that science is a cultural product in constant evolution.

The inclusion of arts learning into STEM education has distinct benefits. STEAM encourages the development of creative problem-solving skills, inventive thinking, imaginative design capabilities, and obtaining a more well-rounded skillset to tackle challenges.

Hello everyone!

Project updates!

- Results are in and the majority of the team has queries about continuing project activities in April since it would not be including all students equally. Therefore by the major vote the student Activities in relation to S.T.E.A.M would be stopped as they are and will therefore start preparing the e-book during April!
- In the meantime I will be setting up a page reading "S.T.E.A.M vs COVID-19". In this page anyone is open to upload any extra materials as they please. It would not be uploaded on our end project padlet however everyone is open to share ideas, work, quotes, videos etc to help each other get through this difficult time. This is NOT obligatory and it is just extra for anyone who wish to share their work with others.
- Project will therefore be finalized by May right on time to share the ebook with your community, families, friends, students. In the meantime please stay safe.
- Anyone who wishes to review the results you can visit t
