

EUROSTAR ERASMUS+ IN PORTO

I was very excited and motivated to participate in this project when I read/heard about it, especially since it wasn't my first experience with student exchange programs.

Personally, I didn't know if this new setup of not staying in a student's home when coming over would work, but once the experience actually happened it felt much better than the original scheme, in my opinion.

Looking back, it doesn't seem like the students actually failed to absorb any part of the culture that they would have before.

As expected, it could've been a bit stressful with all of the planning and even looking over the exchange students all the time, but it was all to expose them to our culture and, later on, they'll do the same to us.
