

THE CREEPY-LOOKING
HOUSE

WILL YOU BE ABLE TO...

ESCAPE

It has been a long
day; you are walking
home with some friends and, in the way, you pass by a
huge house that seems ancient...

When passing close to it,
you all hear someone
shouting from the inside of the house: "Help, help!". At first you think entering might be dangerous, but your sympathy makes you go in
to try to help whoever is in danger ...

As soon as you
enter the house the door closes with a
noisy "BANG!". You and your friends
realize it was a
trap and now you
are locked inside
of that haunted
house . . .

Which heading is the most accurate for this paragraph?

- L) The effects of government policy on food output
- M) The effects of government policy in rich countries
- T) The probable effects of new international subsidy agreement
- R) Governments and the environment's management

The role of governments in environmental control is difficult but deeply-rooted. Sometimes, states try to manage the resources on its own, and this leads to a bad-end situation. Often, however, governments act in an even more harmful way. They actually subsidise the exploitation and consumption of natural resources. A whole range of policies, from farm-price support to protection for coal-mining, cause high-risk environmental damage and (often) are economically senseless.
