Gino Strada

Gino Strada (born 21 April 1948) is an Italian war surgeon and founder of the UN-recognized Italian NGO Emergency.

He worked with the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in the conflict zones of Pakistan, Ethiopia, Peru, Afghanistan, Somalia and Bosnia.

EMERGENCY

- Emergency is a humanitarian NGO that provides free medical treatment to the victims of war, poverty and landmines. it helps civilian victims of war without being hindered by bureaucracy.
- In 1996, it opened its first hospital in Iraqi Kurdistan.

Today, Emergency operates eight hospitals in areas of conflict, including a surgical hospital in Freetown, Sierra Leone, and a hospital in Lashkar Gah, Afghanistan. Fifty-four "First Aid Posts-Health Care Centers", located in heavily mined areas or close to the front lines, are connected to the Emergency hospitals' network

some phrases from his books and interviews

I am not a pacifist. I'm against war.

- all wars are a horror. And that you can not turn away, not to see the faces of those who suffer in silence. "
- "I believe war is something that represents humanity's greatest shame. And I think that the human brain must develop to the point of rejecting this instrument always and in any case as an inhuman instrument. "
