

EQUALITY.

In today's society the word equality is a word that everyone wants to have, but unfortunately very few have. To begin with, equality is synonymous with equity, that is, that we are all equal in social, legislative, etc. Equality in the 21st century is something that unfortunately from any point of view and aspect is not something that really exists, we are talking about countries with a lot of economic difference, women in several countries who are undervalued and who do not have even half of the rights that men have. Let's just take as an example that currently a person who is not of the same culture or nationality or of the same skin color as everyone else is discriminated against and is not treated with the same respect as everyone else.

On the other hand, and if we talk about a future, will everything continue the same or will it improve? Well, from my point of view, in the future, things will surely improve a little, only if we do them well and continue fighting for this much desired equality. But obviously there will never be absolute equality, that inequality will always exist in several countries. Only the future will know...

Let's fight for a better society.

Aya Lebrak Mouslim.