

Letter to future generations

DEAR FUTURES GENERATIONS,

I hope you survived to the big cataclysm because of our pollution we made, of no handling of the nature and unmeasured industrial activities. I talk to you through the time, from 2021. Today, we are on Thursday and outside it's cloudy. All of us in the classroom are wearing a mask, because for 1 year there is a giant worldwide pandemic of corona-virus COVID-19. I hope your generation not is in pain with this epidemic or other plague like diseases or natural disasters such as tornadoes. I hope too that your nuclear power plants, if you still have nuclear power plants, are under control and risks are far away. Now, let's talk about the nature: in 2021, the nature was in a very bad health, the principal forests in the world are going to be destroyed, or are going from bad to worse. I wonder, does Amazon still exist? Eighty percent of the insects have disappeared and sixty percent of the vertebrates have disappeared too. In short, it's no picnic.

HAVE A NICE DAY,

Ulysse T.

P.S. I hope too that you abandoned all the "life-saving" technology that since the industrial revolution, was saving us from nothing of everything that's happened to us.
