

The change begins with you

Hello! My name is Ilinca Pîrlogea and I'm studying at school "Principesa Margareta". I am in the seventh grade. I started volunteering in the sixth grade at my language: Romanian.

Now I help my schoolmates with English and French. I can't say it is easy to do that, because I have to be patient and explain very clearly, but that isn't a problem. Definitely, in the end everything is worth. My mates have better grades and repeating the subjects with them, I memorised it better.

I used my free time to help them and this is the most important. I also helped myself. I understood the lessons better and I've learned something: you musn't be smarter to help somebody. You just have to be capable. Doing exercises with your friend could help both of you. Everyone can help somebody.

Being a volunteer has brought me many benefits. I made lots of friends and helping people is the best prize. To see their smiling faces when they tell you what grade they received after an exam makes you happy and important for them.

In conclusion, I would like to tell other people to help somebody. It doesn't matter if it is a classmate or your brother, if you help him or her at French or Maths. I guarantee that in the end you'll feel good.

FRIENDS SHIP!
