

ACTIVITY : A GERMAN LESSON

Students of B grade have prepared a German lesson and presented it to their class.(see video)

Their comments on the activity testify their satisfaction from this activity , while express their criticism on the classic teacher-centered lesson.

I think that if we prepare a lesson by ourselves while keeping our options open, we have greater motivation since we have the freedom to be creative and original. Also since teamwork is of utmost importance, everyone can contribute something of his own. This way we ~~present our own~~ learn about things of greater value, like communication and cooperation in addition to the classic lesson. In the same time it becomes more interactive and fun solving the problem of students losing their patience or becoming dejected if they get stuck in a boring routine. In the other side it also has some problems. For example something this good requires a lot of time and effort. So at certain occasions it's unclear if the time spent provides the desired outcome. But, generally I believe that by preparing our own school lesson, we deviate from the monotonous teaching method which usually becomes as boring as it could be after a month or two, despite the efforts required. I totally recommend it.

In my opinion our classmates presented the lesson calmly and made us feel comfortably, not only because they already knew us, but also because they were friendly and relaxed. They helped us with our exercises and they had divided and organised their lesson (Powerpoint presentation, revision, proper book utilization etc). Overall, it was a both appropriate and well-organised presentation by our classmates
