Irregular migration

Comparison of irregular border crossings by route between January-December 2013 and January-December 2014

What EU Agencies support Member States' efforts in the area of migration?

Frontex - The European Agency for the Management of Operational Cooperation at the External Borders of the Member States of the European Union facilitates and improves the application of existing and future EU measures relating to the management of external borders.

EASO - The European Asylum Support Office assists Member States in fulfilling their European and international obligations in the field of asylum.

Europol - The European Police Office assists Member States' police forces in improving their cooperation on the prevention and fight against the most serious forms of international crime, such as terrorism, drug trafficking and people smuggling, focusing on the targeting of criminal organisations.

What are the EU rules on returning irregularly staying migrants?

At the end of 2010, the common rules on return (the so-called "Return Directive"), agreed by Member States in 2008, entered into force. They provide for clear, transparent and fair common rules for the return and removal of the irregularly staying migrant, the use of coercive measures, detention and re-entry, while fully respecting the human rights and fundamental freedoms of the persons concerned. The Directive has been transposed into national law by all States bound by it (all Member States except UK and Ireland; plus the 4 Schengen associated countries: Switzerland, Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein). According to Eurostat, of the approximately 425 000 persons issued with a return decision in 2013, those who, as a consequence, have left the EU are approximately 167 000.

What are Readmission Agreements?

These set out clear obligations and procedures for the authorities of the non-EU country and of Member States as to when and how to take back people who are irregularly residing. They aim at improving cooperation between administrations and can only be used after a return decision has been made in accordance with the procedural guarantees set by the Return Directive and the relevant EU asylum rules.

What is the principle of non-refoulement?

A concept which prohibits States from returning a migrant to territories where there is a risk that his or her life or freedom would be threatened on account of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group, or political opinion.

What is the difference between smuggling and trafficking?

Migrants smuggling and trafficking are two diverse, yet interlinked criminal activities perpetrated by criminal networks. The difference between the two is that in the former migrants normally willingly engage in an irregular migration process by paying for the services of a smuggler in order to cross an international border, while in the latter they are the victims of an extremely hideous form of criminal activity where they are coerced into a vicious process of severe exploitation which may or may not be linked to the crossing of a border. In reality, the two phenomena are not easy to disentangle as persons who start their journeys in a voluntary manner might end up in networks of labour or sexual exploitation along the way. Smuggled migrants are also often exposed to violence, gross human rights violations or even death.

How does the EU tackle trafficking in human beings?

The EU Strategy towards the Eradication of Trafficking in Human Beings was adopted in 2012. This updated the 2005 EU Action Plan on best practices, standards and procedures for combating and preventing trafficking in human beings. The Strategy is a set of concrete and practical measures to be implemented over five years. These include prevention, protection, support of the victims and prosecution of the traffickers, as well as the establishment of national law enforcement units specialised in human trafficking and the creation of joint European investigation teams to prosecute cross-border trafficking cases.

Save lives and secure the external borders

What is the “Hotspots” System?

This is a new concept foreseen to be developed in the EU Agenda on Migration. Union Agencies, namely Frontex, EASO and Europol are tasked with providing operational assistance to the Member States in accordance with their respective mandates. The current migratory pressure is characterised by mixed flows of asylum seekers and economic migrants and with the involvement of organised smuggling networks. Member States tend to request assistance from one Agency only expecting that Agency to handle matters which are not necessarily within its mandate. The proposal would allow establishing dedicated hotspot teams from all the Agencies concerned to provide comprehensive support in dealing with mixed migratory flows. Eurojust and EMSA could also be associated to the hotspots as appropriate.

What is the Smart Borders Package?

The “Smart Borders” Package was proposed by the Commission in February 2013. It follows the European Commission Communication of February 2008 suggesting the establishment of an Entry/Exit System (EES) and a Registered Traveller Programme (RTP). It aims to improve the management of the external borders of the Schengen Member States, fight against irregular immigration and provide information on overstayers, as well as facilitate border crossings for pre-vetted frequent non-EU travellers.

What is EUROSUR?

EUROSUR is a multi-purpose system used for detecting, preventing and combating irregular migration and cross-border crime at the external borders and contributing to the protection and saving of migrants’ lives. For these purposes, EUROSUR provides a common framework for information exchange and cooperation among all authorities with a responsibility for the surveillance of the external land and sea borders in the Member States and with Frontex.

What are Common Security and Defence Policy operations?

They are operations under the mandate of the High Representative Vice President agreed by the Member States in line with the procedures and the competence foreseen under Title V of the Treaty on the European Union. CSDP operations will be enhanced in order to foster the capacity of our partners in Africa to manage their borders.

Asylum and protection

What is the current EU legal framework on asylum?

Since 1999, the EU has been working to create a Common European Asylum System (CEAS) and improve the legislative framework in this area. Following the completion of the first stage of CEAS in 2005, which was based on the lowest common denominator between Member States, new rules have been agreed in 2013 (CEAS II). The aim was to ensure that all applicants for international protection are treated equally in an open and fair system, wherever they apply. CEAS II is composed of the following five legal instruments:

- The Asylum Procedures Directive sets out rules on the whole process of claiming asylum.
- The Reception Conditions Directive establishes common standards of reception conditions (housing, food, health care, employment, etc.) for asylum applicants.
- The Qualification Directive establishes common grounds to grant international protection.
- The Dublin Regulation establishes the Member State responsible for the examination of the asylum application.
- The EURODAC Regulation establishes an EU asylum fingerprint database.

What does relocation mean? How does it work?

Relocation is the transfer of persons having an international protection status within the meaning of Directive 2011/95/EU from the Member State which granted them international protection to another Member State where they will be granted similar protection and of persons having applied for international protection from the Member State which is responsible for examining their application to another Member State where their applications for international protection will be examined.

Relocation is a voluntary system requiring for its implementation Member States' pre-agreement to such transfers.

As shown by the table above, asylum applications are unevenly distributed among Member States. In 2014, 72% of the total asylum applications in the EU were received in only 4 Member States: Germany, Sweden, Italy, France.

What does the emergency response system under Art. 78.3 of the Treaty entail? What is the Commission proposing in the short term and the longer term?

To deal with the situation in the Mediterranean, the Commission will, by the end of May, propose triggering the emergency response system envisaged under Art.78.3 of the Treaty. The proposal will include a distribution mechanism for asylum-seekers in clear need of international protection to ensure a fair and balanced participation of all Member States to this common effort. The receiving Member State will be responsible for the examination of the asylum application in accordance with established rules and guarantees. The Commission has defined a redistribution key based on criteria such as GDP, size of population, unemployment rate and past numbers of asylum seekers. This step will be the precursor of a lasting solution. The EU needs a permanent system for sharing the responsibility for large numbers of refugees and asylum seekers among Member States. The Commission will table legislation by the end of 2015 to provide for a mandatory and automatically-triggered relocation system to distribute those in clear need of international protection within the EU when a mass influx emerges. The scheme will take account of the efforts already made on a voluntary basis by Member States.

What is resettlement? How does it work?

Resettlement is the process whereby, on a request from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees ('UNHCR') based on a person's need for international protection, non-EU nationals are transferred from a non-EU country and established in a Member State. Currently, resettlement of refugees is voluntary, with EU efforts being a sum of all national actions. 14 Member States resettle, with three other Member States resettling on ad hoc basis, while the rest does not participate in resettlement despite political expressions of good will.

What are Regional Development and Protection Programmes (RDPP)?

Regional Development and Protection Programmes (RDPPs) aim at supporting long-term capacity building (in particular legislative and administrative framework) of non-EU countries to help them to become robust providers of effective protection in accordance with international law. They are not a tool of immediate humanitarian assistance. RDPPs can include, depending on the needs of the non-EU country in question, actions ranging from support to drafting a legislative and policy framework, building up an administrative structure, support to status determination and reception capacity, support to victims of trafficking and smuggling to advocacy, training to those dealing with refugee issues, etc. The 'development' element aims at contributing to offsetting negative impacts and supporting positive impacts of refugees on host communities as well as providing refugees with improved livelihood opportunities, means for self-reliance and possibilities for local integration. RDDPs are also meant to encompass resettlement.

How does the EU attract non-EU workers?

In 2009, the EU has put in place attractive conditions for non-EU workers considering taking up highly skilled employment in the Member States, creating a harmonised fast-track procedure and common criteria (a work contract, professional qualifications and a minimum salary level) for issuing a special residence and work permit called the “EU Blue Card”. The Blue Card facilitates access to the labour market and entitles holders to socio-economic rights and favourable conditions for family reunification and movement around the EU.

The EU Blue Card Directive also promotes ethical recruitment standards to limit – if not stop entirely – active recruitment by Member States in developing countries already suffering from serious “brain drain”. The EU Blue Card does not create a right of admission; it is demand-driven, i.e. based on a work contract. Its period of validity is between one and four years, with possibility of renewal.

Impact of migration on development

What are the visa requirements for entering into the EU?

The EU Visa Code sets out the procedures and conditions for issuing visas for the purpose of short stays and airport transit.

Citizens from some non-EU countries are required to hold a visa when travelling to the Schengen Area. The EU has a common list of countries whose citizens must have a visa when crossing the external borders and a list of countries whose citizens are exempt from that requirement. These lists are set out in Regulation No 539/2001 and its successive amendments. Generally, a short-stay visa issued by one of the Schengen States entitles its holder to travel throughout the 26 Schengen States for up to 90 days in any 180-day period. Visas for visits exceeding that period remain subject to national procedures.

What are Mobility Partnerships?

The most elaborated bilateral cooperation frameworks in the field of migration. They offer a political framework for comprehensive, enhanced and tailor-made dialogue and cooperation with partner countries, including a set of targets and commitments as well as a package of specific support measures offered by the EU and interested Member States. They include the negotiation of visa facilitation and readmission agreements.
