

The image shows the grand facade of the Comédie-Française building in Paris, France, during the "blue hour" of dusk. The building is a multi-story neoclassical structure with a prominent portico of columns on the ground floor. The sky is a soft, dark grey, and the building's windows and interior lights are beginning to glow, creating a warm contrast with the cool tones of the twilight. The text is overlaid in a white, elegant script font.

The Comédie-Française or Théâtre Français

History

- founded in 1680 by Louis XIV
- merger of the only two Parisian acting company of the time (Guénégaud Théâtre and Hotel Bourgogne)
- oldest active theatre company in the world
- location : Salle Richelieu
- emblem : buzzing hive

- Also known as the “Theatre de la République” and popularly as “La Maison de Molière”

Molière

- French playwright, actor, and poet and one of the best greatest writers in French language
- wrote comedies, farces, tragicomedies, comédie-ballets
- considered as the patron of French actors

- 1st representation : 25 august 1680
- essentially composed of plays by Molière and Racine
- mostly the French nobility
- young tragedian Talma
- Rachel : most famous actress in XIXe
