

Bulgarian traditional games

There are many games in Bulgaria that are popular with children, but two of them are the most favorite.

Dodgeball.

Rules

The game is played on a field divided by a middle line into two equal fields, by two teams of 10 players each (the number may vary). One of the players is a captain. The draw determines which of the teams will start the game (receives the ball) and which of them chooses a field for their team. Then each team spreads freely in its field. The captains stand behind the end line of the opponent's playing field. At the signal to start the game, the captain of the team entitled to the kick-off passes the ball to his teammates from the playing field or tries to hit opposing players who run freely around their field. In this way, the captain and his team exchange the ball until it is caught by the opposing team, which in turn begins to pass with their captain and try to hit the opposing players. The player hit by the ball leaves the field of play. If a team player catches the ball when passing between opposing players, this will allow a player from his team who has already cleared the field to return to it for play.

Two are few, three are many

Rules

The students line up in two circles and form pairs that face the center of the circle. Two players are determined - one who will chase and one who will run away from him. They are outside the circle and they can't come inside of circle. The one who chases tries to catch the other player who runs away. If he manages to touch it, the roles are reversed. However, the persecuted can be saved by standing in front of the first participant in any pair. Then the second becomes the third and he must start chasing.
