

DRYING

METHOD OF CONSERVATION

Drying is a food preservation technique that consists in eliminating liquids from food by subjecting them to a source of heat.

Once dried, foods must be hermetically sealed in containers or waterproof wraps, to prevent the food from reabsorbing water from the air.