Berlin is the capital and the largest city in Germany. Geographically it sits in north-eastern Germany and has a tempretate continental climate. Berlin's summer is warm with average temperatures of degree of 23 centigrade. Berlin wall, museums and the „Brandenburger Tor" are many landmarks to be seen in this city.

Located in west in Germany in the Rhine-Ruhr bay area, Cologne is one of the warmest cities in Germany. The city is aswarm with visitors during „Crazy Days" where people dress up and participate in balls and parades.

Frankfurt is Germany's hub for commerce and transportation. The summer is warm with average high temperatures of 25 degree of centigrade. Frankfurt's European Union district is a landmark that everybody has to see when they come there

Frankfurt's banking district, Source: pixabay.com, Author: 12019

Hamburg is a major port city in nothern Germany. Due to its location, Hamburg is slightly cooler. Average high temperatures only reach 22 degree of centigrade. A well known landmark is the „Hamburger Miniaturland".