

Education and Industry in Hanover

In Hanover you can study at the Leibniz University, which offers an education in many different subjects, but even more notable is the MHH, a top German university hospital. It combines education, medical treatment and scientific research, especially in the fields of transplantation, biomedicine and immunology, and for example developed an antibody-test for the coronavirus.

Some of these education facilities work together closely with an important company for Hanover: Volkswagen. This car manufacturer and its suppliers employ about 32,000 people, which is more than 5% of the total workforce of the city. Another big part are fairs and congresses: Hanover hosts five out of the ten of the biggest fairs in Germany.

Leibniz University, source: Pixabay.de, picture by Agnes Böing