

When Chrysanthemum came home, her parents asked about school. She said, "I don't like my name! My classmates call me a flower, smell me! They are bullies!" cried Chrysanthemum. "Don't worry, dear", said her father. "We'll think a way out. We'll talk to your class" .Next day Chrysanthemum told the teacher that her parents would talk to the pupils. After the long break the door of the classroom door opened and Chrysanthemum's parents came in. They asked to turn on the overhead projector. In the slides they told how they got acquainted- that father gave a bunch of flowers- chrysanthemums. Mum liked them so much that gave her newly-born girl a name Chrysanthemum. "Every name is special in a way", said Mother," parents give their children names that are important for them." "You all are dearest for your parents and your name is the most beautiful!" said father. In the last slide the pupils read "STOP BULLYING", so parents explained the word "bully". Silence was in the classroom. Children were so surprised! Chrysanthemum's parents explained and the name didn't look so unusual and strange!