

RESULTS OF THE TEACHERS' SURVEY:

STEP 3 AND FINAL EVALUATION OF THE ETWINNING PROJECT: CLIMATE CHANGE IS A POLITICAL CHOICE

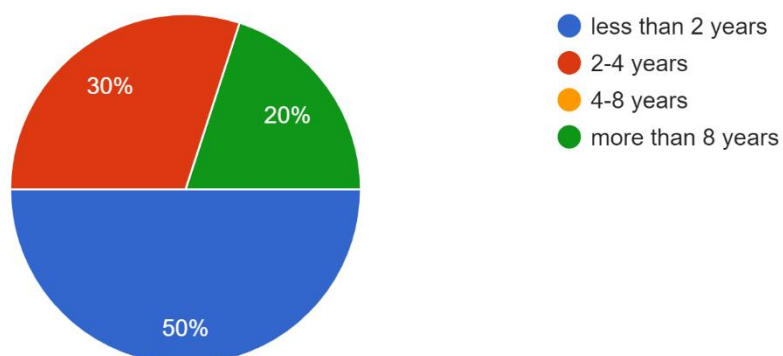

Where are you from?

10 responses

How long have you been working in eTwinning projects for?

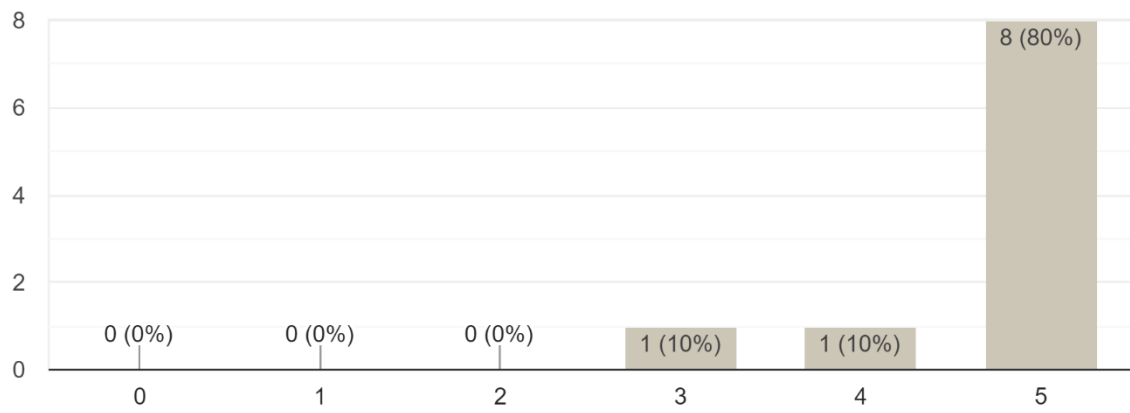

10 responses

ABOUT STEP 3:

Please rate Activity 3.1. Quotes about public speaking

10 responses

Please rate Activity 3.2. Analysis of body language techniques in speeches

10 responses

Please rate Activity 3.3. Linguistic analysis of political speeches

10 responses

Please rate Activity 3.4. Students' political speeches: writing & recording

10 responses

Please rate Activity 3.5. Students' online meeting: INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION ON CLIMATE CHANGE

10 responses

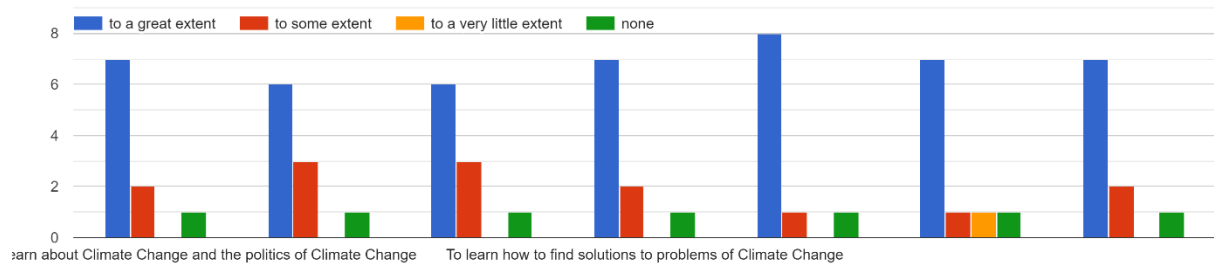

Any comments on activities 3.1 to 3.5?

- I am sure that all the activities planned will improve students
- 3.5 "The international convention on climate change", was definitely the most interesting activity for those students who participated but maybe time per participant should be strictly limited, otherwise the meeting lasts a bit too long.
- Very well organized
- It was a challenging part, especially the linguistic analysis of speeches, and writing their speech; but they did it great. I think there were good tasks for students as they learnt about climate change, took awareness and also practised their English language skills and public speaking skills too.
- Fine activities to engage students in proactivity and to involve them in politics
- Challenging but interesting
- The Analysis activity was a bit too long
- Very good activities to develop students' skills.

ABOUT THE WHOLE PROJECT:

To what extent the following objectives have been met for your students?

What have you liked the most about the project?

- I liked all three steps
- Exchange
- Maybe the part about the ugly food and its consequences was something that students were not aware before the project. So, I think this was something new and interesting for them.
- I am very satisfied from the project
- The fact that we have all worked on a matter of high importance as it is climate change, sustainable development and also the commitment of politicians in this issue, through a series of motivating and collaborative activities. Sharing and committing to a common global problem.
- The promotion of critical thinking
- The collaboration, the exchange of ideas, the freedom we've been given, the outcomes.
- The fact that students have used their own resources and skills to learn about a certain topic.
- The activities and students collaboration.
- Communication and collaboration with different cultures

What have you liked the least?

- The Covid
- The fact that due to the pandemic the transnational groups did not actually work very well.
- I can't something that bothers me
- the fact that that three of the partners schools have been in confinement, 2 for the whole duration of the project and another for a period of time, this year has been difficult to work, even online because of all these constraints.
- Nothing to point out
- Some students' unwillingness to participate.
- Some of the activities were a bit tough for som of the students
- The pandemic situation.

What have your students learnt?

- Awareness about climate change
- I hope they have learnt many things about environmental problems and how we can reorient this situation if we all take action not only as a world community but also as individuals who in our everyday life stand responsible for every little action.
- As I mentioned they raise environment awareness
- A lot: to share, to commit to a cause, to use English for communicative purposes, to learn and find solutions, to prepare campaigns, to write and deliver a speech in public... it has been an enriching project
- Besides the improvement of linguistic skills, the importance of interacting towards global thinking to solve essential issues.
- How to make a public speech, how to debate, the impact of climate change and how we can address this issue.
- communication skills and a lot of information about food waste
- Lifestyle, climate change, languages and collaboration skills' çs.
- Communicating and sharing ideals

What have you learnt?

- I have also gained very valuable experience from my partners and from the project.
- Exchanging experiences is the major goal
- Basically that group work is not easy to manage even though it can be more encouraging to learn for our students.
- It was my first time in such a program and I suppose that the whole program it was a good lesson for me
- to work in collaboration with enthusiastic teachers of other countries. We all learn from one another.
- Digital skills and group dynamics
- Ways in which I can raise students' awareness of climate change, persuade them to change attitude and help them develop their presentation, debate and public speaking skills.
- How project work can help students to develop their own skills
- eTwinning Project organization.
- The same as the students

How can the project be improved?

- Every phase of the project is really well-organised
- Going abroad.
- Maybe, as I said before, the coordination among the four schools taking part in the project and the activities the transnational groups had to do.
- I don't know I don't think that there are a lot of things that anyone could find to improve
- Out of our willingness, to be able to carry out campaigns to raise awareness in our schools; impossible to do because of the covid measures or confinements.

- It was a well accomplished project
- Some activities could have been omitted because of the 6-month lockdown and the distance learning.
- Limiting the number of students taking part in it as some of them don't make the best of the opportunity
- Other activities.

Any other comment?

- Would like to see you all soon.
- No, that's all. Thank you!
- I am very glad to cooperate with all of you
- It has been a pleasure to work with these fantastic partners. The students have been committed to their tasks and enjoyed taking part.
- None
- No other comments.
- Not now
- I'm happy to participate in this project.