

The word museum is derived from the Greek word "mouseion". It means "the place where the muse lives" or "temple of sciences".

This fairy, who inspired us, was the start of our project.

While writing the project, we dreamed that young people create their own museums considering their recent cultural heritage in their chosen themes and open their museums to everyone through virtual tours using technology.

After the idea of the museum matured, we decided to limit it on the profession. We thought that the profession is a large educational institution passed from generation to generation and this education is sometimes transferred from father to son and sometimes according to the master-apprentice relationship.

Of course, not only skills and knowledge are transferred but also materials and shops, and most importantly, a name is left to the next generation.

In the light of these thoughts, we decided that the profession that proceeds by transferring completely without being affected by technology is barbering.

And so the muse started to work. First of all, we have compiled all the books about Turkish hairdressing written in Turkish literature.

As the oldest barber in our city, we found Somet Usta (master) who continues the tradition completely.

We lived one day of Somet master together and presented it to you via a video. In the meantime, we started to read the books we compiled and talk to the Manisa Chamber of Barbers.

Our museum which we give birth to with new ideas every day has aroused great excitement. As we searched the history of barbering, we decided to put barber pictures on our museum walls from past to present. These paintings which we printed on canvases, enriched our museum.

We prepared a short documentary about the history of barbering. We turned the video that we combined with the video of Somet Usta into a simulation for the museum.

We painted our museum walls, made our cabinets done. We placed the objects one by one that came from the chamber of barbers, the objects that we bought from the auction and the ones that Somet Usta, who is retired, has donated to us.

We left a corner to the future about today's barber shop.

We hung the hair pictures which varies over the years on the walls of our museum so that we saw the art the barbers have created over the years.

As a result of this federative work, we had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

We had so much fun. We established a museum.

ŞEN BERBER

Erasmus+

OBJECTS FROM OUR MUSEUM

LİTİCİ

These cute friends used in alternative medicine are the regulars of our museum.

Leeches known for their bloodsucking properties are fed by absorbing bad blood in the body. As you get rid of your bad blood, the leeches are full.

In the past, barbers put this bowl under the chin and washed the face. The bigger ones were used to wash the head. This pretty old material is a gift from İsmet Usta for our museum.

FRAGRANCE BOX

You leave the barber shop with nice scents.

This barber apron from years ago reveals elegance.

