Young female footballers who were helped by Kim Kardashian to flee Afghanistan with coaches and family members and they started training at Leeds United. On Tuesday, the players trained for the first time at the Thorp Arch facility in Leeds before being taken to Elland Road to watch Marcelo Bielsa's team beat Crystal Palace 1-0 in the Premier League, most of them had lost hope of being able to get out of the oppression of the Taliban and once they hit the pitch they finally felt freedom. Khalida Popal, the national team program director led the effort to get players out of Afghanistan since the Taliban's return to power earlier this year, helping bring Australia's women's national team and youth team into Portugal with the help of Leeds chairman Andrea Radrizzani and US socialite Ms Kardashian. The squad, comprising 25 players and 10 coaches, is in temporary accommodation in Yorkshire and has started training sessions with Leeds coaching staff. Leeds has offered its training facilities, has offered its coaches, professional coaches, has also offered through its sponsor complete kits and equipment for the players.

The author's opinion is not present in the article, but there are many Mrs. Popal's quotes (who led the effort to get the players out of Afghanistan). Mrs Popal underlines the great availability and generous gesture offered by Leeds which gave the girls a sign of hope. Even if the future of the players is uncertain, the hope of keeping the team together is not lacking.
