Warning: The British Government has now approved a law banning the wearing of the full-face veil, the niqab.

On July 1st of 2021, the British Government has approved a law that implies the prohibition of wearing full-face veils indoors, such as in supermarkets, stores and even in school. According to some research, it is said that the British Government didn't hear the opinion of the muslims, who think that this is a shameful and disrespectful law.

If someone is seen wearing a full-face veil, the punishment can be the payment of a fine of £200 or, in case the person refuses constantly to take away their full-face veil, they can be arrested. The British Government justifies their actions saying that "This is only a way to end with all the terrorists attacks that Britain has been receiving constantly.

Besides that, if in their country our women need to wear a full-face veil, it is fair enough that in our country they can't use their full-face veil". The government also said that this law is important "to promote social interaction and gender equality". To them, the next step is to prohibit the use of the veil in public places and on the streets. Despite the law being passed, a lot of protests are expected to end with this law. A British woman has stated that "this law brings up a lot of issues such as discrimination based on gender, religion and ethnic origin" and that "the British people, muslim or non-muslim, should be against this law, since this is not only disrespectful to the muslims but also violates the article 8 and 9 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights".
