

Honorable chair and fellow delegates,

We are facing a problem of a grave danger that we cannot afford to overlook. Climate change. We live in a world of environmental illiteracy and we are starting to feel the consequences on our own state of health. It is in our best interests to start to work today on better ways to prevent further destruction. In 2018, Germany was in the top affected countries by climate change, along with Japan and the Philippines. We are confronting with heat waves and droughts, which lead to more deaths and illnesses. It is imperative to create more green spaces in the cities, spread awareness through public campaigns and build heat protection shelters equipped with needed supplies and medical staff. As a developed country, we support and believe in a strong and effective cooperation between nations of any economic status. Like Wendell Berry said, "The Earth is what we all have in common." So, what are we waiting for, esteemed delegates? Let's find together the right ways to help our world!
