

LEONARDO TORRIGLIA

Attending the Erasmus project at school has opened my mind and changed my way to approach the other people.

I've understood that nowadays is really easy to meet new cultures and teaching to young people to communicate all over the world with cultural exchanges and online is what our community needs in order to improve.

With the radio and the stories told by my schoolmates i've discovered that also if someone lives in another part of the world can have your same interests and you can get on with him from the beginning.

I can't wait to meet the other people that will come here in Bologna and to spend some time with them.

During these lessons i've understood the real meaning of the motto "no man is an island".
