

NoMI is a multidimensional project aimed at reflecting, planning and carrying out the Erasmus+ activities between six European centers. It's aimed at developing the student's transversal skills with an emphasis on critical thinking, social studies, foreign languages and digital skills by promoting innovative practices in education.

This project aims to: deepen the idea of European citizenship, analyze our European multicultural societies and their problems, establish innovative educational paths using technology, and communicate in foreign languages, namely English, French, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese.

This European project includes students between the ages of 15 and 18 from the following countries: France (Tahiti and La Reunion), Spain (Aldaia), Italy (Bologna), Finland (Espoo) and Portugal (Madeira).

On 8th May 2019, the second mobility of the project took place, on Madeira Island, where groups of students and teachers from the six cities traveled with the purpose of participating in various activities, together with the Portuguese students, to promote not only multiculturalism, but also the inclusion and interaction among the young students.

All the activities carried out during the project were essential to meet the other members, other traditions and cultures, but also to improve communication in the universal language. All students of the project participated in the soiree literary, they read texts, recited poems and sang songs, whether in English or in their native language. With this activity, we understand how important literature is in every country, and we also cultivate a union and friendship among all members.

Another attractive activity was the painting of the tiles, because besides being something very common in the Portuguese territory, we can show to our colleagues how difficult and fun it is.

The debate was an event which sought to show that multiculturalism is very important in European societies, and this project is an excellent proof of how the inclusion and conviviality with people from other countries is very beneficial for both sides.

The tourist route along with the visit to the museums and the excursion around the island was very useful to reveal the history of the island and the Madeiran people. The walk along the Levada Folhadal, is mandatory for those who visit the island, because they can be in contact with the Laurissilva Forest, which is so unique and important for the island.

These activities were very entertaining, unique and unforgettable, but they involved a lot of work before, during and even after mobility, by all those involved in the project. Regarding the negative aspects, there isn't much to point out because the project and the activities were very well planned and elaborated. In short, this project is very advantageous, because there was a lot of fun and the possibility of meeting and making new friends with people from other countries, and even promote multiculturalism something so essential and fundamental in European societies.

Margarida Henriques