The kingdom of Najus

Once upon a time, in the small kingdom of Najus, a princess was born. Her name was July. July grew up and became a lively young girl.

She liked music, fairy tales, nature and travelling with her bear, Teddy. Teddy was her best friend.

But one day the Queen, July's mum, was sick and died. The princess was very, very sad. Every night she wore the pyjamas that were a present from her mum.

One day the king, July's dad, put a crown on his daughter's head.

The princess remembered her mum and went to the woods, to sit under the old oak tree where the Queen used to tell her wonderful fairy tales. She didn't even notice that it was getting dark. When she finally realised that the sun had set, she started walking along the path towards the castle.

Suddenly, she bumped into a magic pig and his guards. The magic pig had been sent by the king's enemy to transform the princess into a frog, and so he did! July was really sad... Her crown fell into a pond and she started crying.

A prince who was just going past heard her cries. He went to see what was going on, but all he saw was the crown and the crying frog... He was a bit puzzled!!!

He was even more puzzled when the frog asked him for a kiss. But he'd heard about some stories related to frogs and princes, so he thought – “yeah, why not?”

He kissed the frog and...the beautiful princess July appeared. They instantly fell in love.

Some months later they got married and from then on lived happily ever after, with their friend Teddy.
