

The last day with Emma and Alicia

At 7.30 we woke up and had breakfast. Alicia had her usual milkshake made out of walnuts, cacao, milk and coffee. Emma was not too hungry so she only had one and a half mandarin with a glass of water.

We went to school at 8.25 and started at 8.30. Our first class was an exposition about “La Alhambra”. The exposition was presented by the seniors at the school and they only talked in Spanish, therefore the Swedish students, including Emma did not understand anything.

Después de la presentación, sobre las 9:00 nos dirigimos a la entrada principal del instituto donde realizamos una yinkana en francés. Fue bastante divertido y muy interesante. Sobre todo el tabú. Al terminar la actividad, tuvimos un pequeño recreo para poder descansar y tomar el almuerzo.

After the short break we went in to the school library and watched two exposition, the first one was about “El Parque Nacional de Doñana” presented by a boy in the year above Alicia and the second one was about “Ciencia en Al-Ándalus” presented by a girl also in the year above Alicia. Both expositions were great and presented in English, which means that the Swedish students could understand everything.

Tuvimos que ir de prisa a la clase de plástica porque íbamos muy mal de tiempo para realizar la siguiente actividad. Cuando llegamos allí, Pedro, el profesor de plástica nos explicó que teníamos que ir a por piedras para realizar la actividad. Esta consistía en pintar un mural con las técnicas e instrumentos de la prehistoria
