THE POPE PALACE

The Palace of the Popes in Avignon, in the south of France was built between 1309 and 1377 under Benedict XII

During the Avignonese captivity (period where the papal seat was transferred to Avignon) 7 French popes lived in this palace under the control of the French monarchy.

At this time Avignon was the center of trade and cultural exchanges in Western Europe. The Palace of the Popes in Avignon is a great example of architecture in Europe. There is a courtyard, a cloister, many rooms and decorated chapels. This palace was also a fortress.
