

REAL BRIDGE

Once upon a time there was a bridge which was used as a military strategy because it was very unstable and could easily collapse. So the generals used to make it collapse whenever the enemies tried to pass it. It worked every time so they kept winning wars.

But one day the enemies decided to make a new bridge on their own so they could cross it easily and that worked. The enemies were rich and they were so happy that they decided to name that bridge as the real bridge.

A few weeks later one of the generals disguised as one of the enemies but he was noticed a few months later. When they caught him they felt bad because of his constant shouts and cries.

From that day on they made a peace offer and they decided to destroy the collapsing bridge. Both parts agreed to maintain the Real Bridge and signed a peace treaty.

André Gomes 8º VC