

What emotions & mood do we know best? How can we express them without words?

The students are asked to write down the emotions & moods they know best, the ones they experience more often. After a class collection of all their ideas, the students work in small groups and discuss and decide together about the way they can 'represent' 3 emotions/moods without using words. The results are not always ...crystal-clear ;-) but they real make an effort to carry out the task, and realised they had to reflect on what causes an emotion to be able to represent it.
