

Chocolate-cup (jicara), made in Alcora, Spain, about 1746-60, tin-glazed earthenware

This cup was created a long time ago so that people can drink chocolate in peace; currently the original ones no longer exist due to all the time that has passed. There are only replicas! Currently a replica is in the Victoria and Alberto museum

https://www.europeana.eu/es/item/2059516/data_foodanddrink_O160289

Samuel Ramírez and Enrique curiel Santander