Summary

Question

Individual

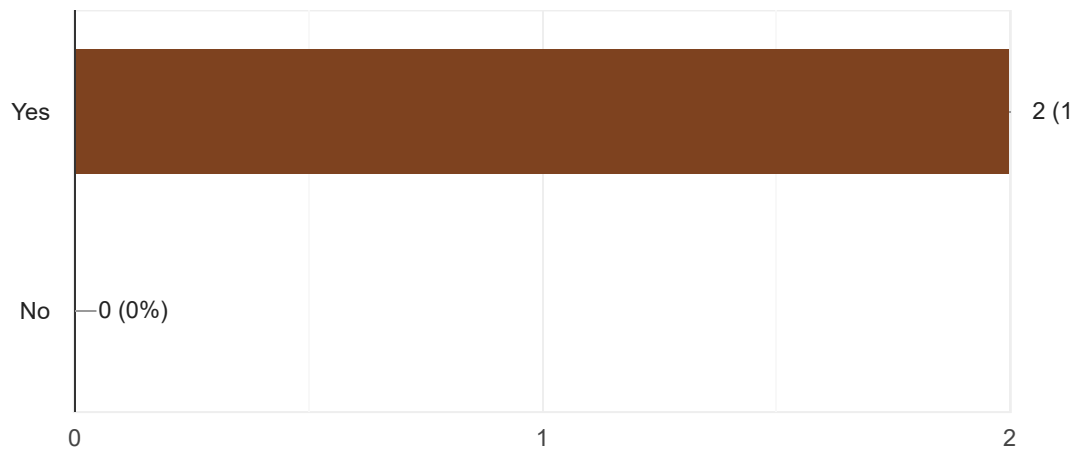

"Here comes the Sun" achieved its aims.

2 responses

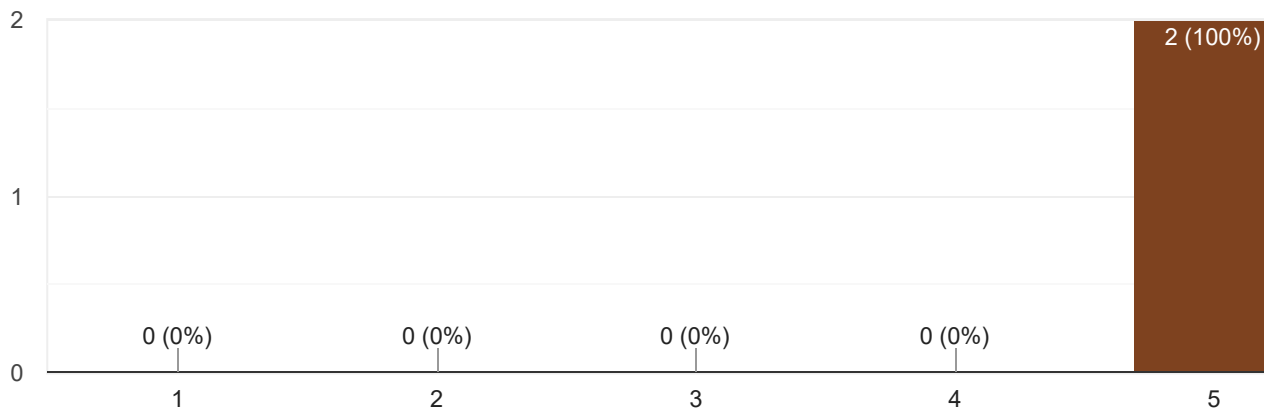

"Here comes the Sun" improved my work with my students.

2 responses

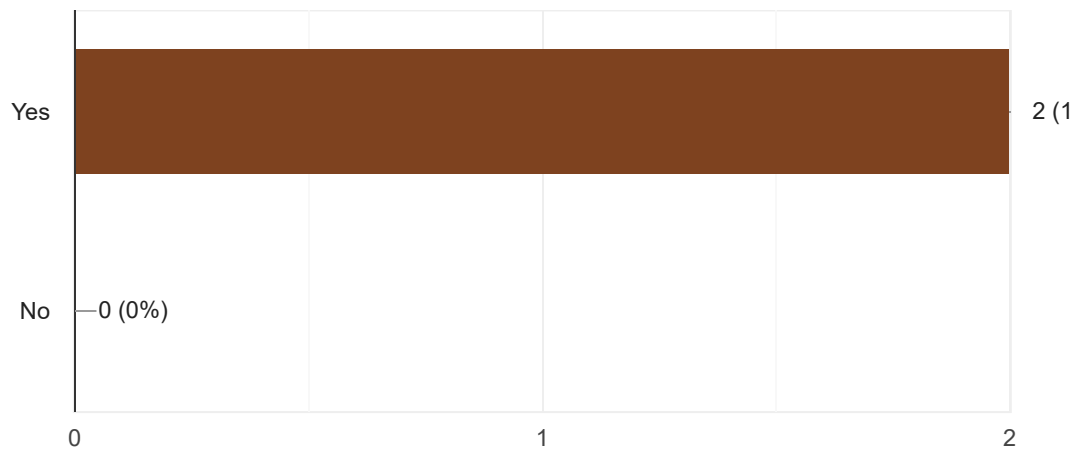

I learned a lot from the other participating educators

2 responses

I encountered difficulties during the project.

2 responses

If you encountered difficulties, what were they?

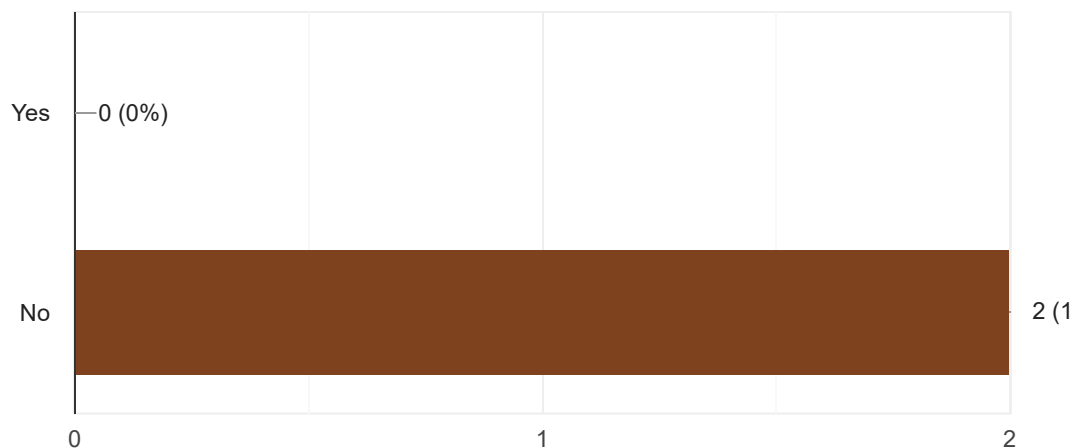

2 responses

It was challenging to complete the steps of the project during the pandemic. Also, it was difficult to involve my pupils more with ICT due to lack of equipment and teaching hours.

Online presentation of material

I would make changes in "Here comes the Sun"

2 responses

If "yes", write a short text about it.

How do you feel now that the project is finished?

2 responses

The collaboration with a colleague from another European country was inspiring and gave me space to develop my creativity as a teacher and improve my communication skills. The project gave me the opportunity to see other aspects of my pupils personalities. "Here come the Sun" and especially "Learn from each other", helped pupils for whom typical education is challenging, to engage in the learning process. It was very interesting to see pupils and teacher from another country unfold their creativity and how they work together. Finally, it was fulfilling to see pupils from the two participating countries collaborate in interschool working groups and I was amazed by the results!

It was a great first experience, and i look forward to future e-twinning projects
