What is poverty? (Hanna and Tiia)

Absolute or extreme poverty refers to a state where the minimum conditions for food, clothing and housing are not met. According to the World Bank definition, absolute poverty means living on less than $ 1.90 a day. Absolute poverty is most common in developing countries.

Relative poverty refers to the clear deprivation of an individual or group compared to the average standard of living or lifestyle of the rest of the population. People living in relative poverty must fight to live a normal life and to participate in the economic, social and cultural functions of society.

Reasons for poverty (Nilla and Roope)

Poverty

Poverty comes, when people can not go to school, and then they can not get to great work. So they can not get money very well. If people can not get food and clean water, that is one kind of poverty too. The wealth of the three richest people in the world is more than the combined product of the least developed countries and their gross population of 600 million people.

Absolute poverty

It means, that example you do not have enough money for nutrition and clothes, or even a home. So, then you are absolutely poor.

Most of the poor people live in Nigeria,
Mali and Africa.

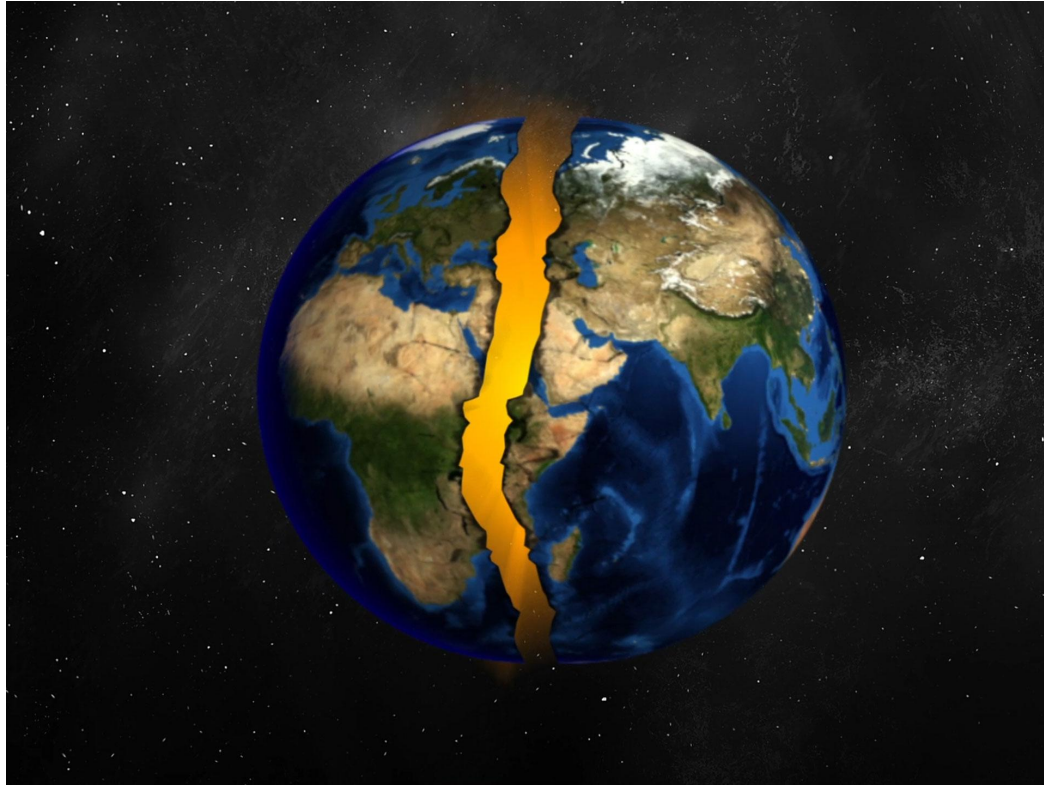

Poverty also affects the inability to influence one's on affairs and living conditions.

Poverty includes hunger, malnutrition in education, and lack of health care.

Half of the people still live in poverty.

21% of the poor live on about 1€ a day.

Only

Extreme poverty has fallen by about 800 million since 1999
