

Scotland's Ghost Road

Late, one dark night in 1962, a lorry drives through the east of Dumfries and Galloway, on the A75, known as the Kinmount straight. It may have been an ordinary day for the 2 lorry drivers, but it would not be an ordinary night.

Suddenly, out of nowhere, a large hen comes flying through the sky, headed straight for impact with the windscreen but just when it should have struck the glass, the hen disappeared. The ghostly hen wasn't alone. If the drivers weren't terrified enough already, they then saw a mysterious van driving crazily across the road. And a menagerie of other ghostly animals, appearing and disappearing without explanation.

The A75 has since become known one of the most haunted roads of Scotland. Travelers choosing to brave this road have reported seeing screaming hags, phantoms, horses, carriages, gloomy creatures and even extraterrestrial beings. Some have even seen ghostly beings crossing the road.

Are YOU brave enough to drive through Scotland's most ghosted road at night?

Source: <https://ebooks.visitscotland.com/ghosts-myths-legends/ghost-road-audio/>

1. Read the text. USE YOUR READING TECHNIQUES.

2. Complete the boxes with words from the text.

3. Draw the story (5 scenes) and write a caption under each drawing.