

English language techniques for self-study

The podcast technique

Podcasts are a kind of listening that you are able to listen it in any moment, while you are driving, running, cooking, etc. There are a huge variety of topics, even of learning some idiom you want, in this case English. So, maybe your ears will get used to English with podcasts. That is the reason why they are pretty useful.

I attach here some of the best podcasts I have ever listened:

Language exchange websites online

English learners want to talk to fellow English learners, and the good news is that there are numerous websites that specifically focus on language exchanges. Join the language exchange community so you can communicate with other self-study students like you. One of the websites you can try is Speaky, where you can meet native English speakers who are glad to talk with you and help you out.

A screenshot of the Papora website's language exchange section. At the top, there's a navigation bar with the Papora logo, a language selector set to 'English', and buttons for 'LOG IN' and 'REGISTER'. Below this is the main heading 'Language Exchange Online'. A search bar contains fields for 'His/She speaks', 'Any Country', 'Male & Female', and 'All ages', with a 'Search' button. The main content area is titled 'Search for a Language Partner' and features a grid of six user profile cards. Each card shows a profile picture, a green status indicator, and text indicating they 'Speaks: Spanish' and 'Learning: English'. To the left of the grid, there's a section 'Choose a Popular Language' with a list of language exchange programs: English, Spanish, French, German, Italian, Portuguese, and Russian.

Playing video-games in English

Video-games have such a massive story and vocabulary, so let's imagine the quantity of new vocabulary you would learn, if you play it in English. In the whole video-games you have the opportunity to choose the idiom, so you can try it in some typical and famous game that everyone has played as Pokemon, Animal Crossing, Fifa, etc.
