Once upon a time there lived a little girl. Everybody told her the Golden girl, because her hair was as golden. She was so kind.

One day the Golden girl decided to invite guests, so she had to send invitations. She prepared a delicious dish and cleaned the house. Then she kneaded a traditional round wheat bread and put it by the window sill to cool down. The Wheat bread looked around, jumped down and ran away to see the wide world.. The Bread rolled along into the forest and suddenly met the Little pig and told him: The Golden girl invites you to visit her at her home!

She rolled again. On her way
she met the Donkey Karakachan.
Hello, Donkey! The Golden girl invites you to visit her at her home!

On her way around the forest, she met the Wolf.

Auuuu , I will eat you. - said the Wolf.

Don't eat me, Wolf, I will sing you a song.-said the Wheat Bread and sat on his muzzle: "I'm a happy Wheat Bread, with a crunchy brown side. The Golden girl invites you to visit her at her home!"

Then She rolled again. She rolled and rolled and suddenly met the Little Goat and also invited him to be a guest in the Golden girl's house.

Finally, she tired from this trip, she sat on a tree, but suddenly heard a noise. She looked around and saw a Mitten-a moving Mitten. It was full of many animals. She invited them too, because she knew that the Golden girl would be very happy to see them all. Everyone went to the house. She opened the door and when she saw them she smiled and clapped her hands with astonishment. Everyone came in, sat around the table but she treated them with delicious bread and fragrant hot tea with honey.
