Can we define our character precisely? Our character is changing. If we must answer yes or no then yes, we are a collage of opposite characteristics. These characteristics are changing. They are yang one time, and yin some other time. It is like in volleyball when you hit the ball to start or to reflect. We see one moment of the game

Is it possible to define your character precisely with opposite characteristics - Yin or Yang?

Well in my opinion : No, because everyone is different and everyone has different characteristics, maybe some are yin and some yang

So you can't really say you are 100 % yin oder 100% yang --> I would definitely say no.

I think getting an idea of someone's personality precisely by their opposite characteristics can be hard, but it's possible.

Yin ou Yang peut donner une indication sur le caractère d'une personne, mais cela n'est pas définitif.

Yin or Yang can give an indication of a person's character, but this is not definitive.

In my opinion it is not easy to detect if we are Yin or yang because each person has different characteristics and you need more than one to really know what you are.

It is not possible because sometimes I do things related more with yin and others with yang and also, because when you are getting old, you change not only physically, you can change things you like to do, your thoughts, etc.

I think yes. After all, to understand whether you belong to Ying or Yang, you need to forgive the test, but there are touched upon the topics of your character and disposition. Therefore, it seems to me that Ying is more closed and cold, while Yang is more open and cheerful.

I think yes. Because basically a person forms himself and he can understand what he refers to more, to yin or yang. But in a person there can be only bad or good, in any case there is a drop of evil in good and vice versa.
