- The Monastery of Saint Naum is an Eastern Orthodox monastery in North Macedonia, named after the medieval Saint Naum who founded it. It is situated along Lake Ohrid, 29 kilometres south of the city of Ohrid. He was buried in the church itself. He was a disciple and a follower of the Cyril and Methodius brothers, the founders of the old macedonian alphabe.
- Bay of Bones Cultural and historical landmark and a tourist attraction - Museum on Water - an exceptional archaeological complex,. On the southern coast of Ohrid Lake, a pile-dwelling settlement has been erected, an authentic reconstruction of a part of the pile-dwelling settlement which in the past was spreading at a total surface of 8.500, dating back between 1200 and 700 BC.
- The Ancient theatre of Ohrid of the Hellenistic period is located in Ohrid, North Macedonia. It was built in 200 BC and is the only Hellenistic-type theatre in the country. During Roman times, the theater was also used for gladiator fights
- Plaošnik or simply Plaoš is an archaeological site and holy place in Ohrid, 250 meters below Samuil's Fortress. The complex will have konaks (mansions) as in the time of Saint Clement of Ohrid, The church was built by St. Clement in the year 893 on the foundation of an early Christian basilica, and dedicated to St. Panteleimon. It was here that the Ohrid Literary School, a center of Slavonic literary and cultural activity where more than 3,500 disciples were educated. St. Clement was buried in this church, in the tomb which was built by his own hands. The baptistery basilica with hooked crosses (swastikas) on the mosaic floors was discovered, dating b/n 4th and 6th century. This early Christian basilica at Plaoshnik upon which the Kliment's monastery was built in the 9th century, was dedicated to St. Paul the Apostle who preached Christianity in Lychnidos (present-day Ohrid) in the 1st century A.D.
- Samuel's Fortress is a fortress in the old town of Ohrid, during the rule of Tsar Samuel of Bulgaria at the turn of the 10th century. It was estored in 2003. According to recent excavations by Macedonian archaeologists, it was contended that this fortress was built on the place of an earlier fortification, dated to the 4th century BC, which was probably built by King Philip II of Macedon.
- Saint John the Theologian, Kaneo is a Macedonian Orthodox church situated on the cliff over Kaneo Beach overlooking Lake Ohrid. The church is dedicated to John of Patmos, the writer of Revelation, who has been by some considered to be the same person as John the Apostle. The construction date of the church is believed to be built in the 13th century. Restoration work in 1964 led to the discovery of frescoes in its dome.
