

Exchange week: Donington in Viana

Creative writing

13-03-2019

Once upon a time there was a little rabbit in the Portuguese kingdom. He was in fear of the princess, because her favourite dish was rabbit stew. One day the king ordered every villager to catch every rabbit to please his daughter. So, the rabbit feeling threatened, hopped away as fast as he could from one aggressive villager.

Accidentally, he fell into a mysterious dry well. In the corner of his eye, he saw something bright; it was a magical cloak and boots. He put them on and immediately became very powerful. With that power, he hopped as high as he could to escape the well.

He was ready to plot his revenge against the princess. He flew with his cloak to the castle. When he arrived at the huge wooden doors, he jumped onto the balcony that belonged to the princess. The young princess was just chilling whilst listening to Fado music and drinking some port, when the little rabbit with all his strength smacked the door wide open.

She was shocked, and unexpectedly without saying anything the rabbit enchanted a spell onto the princess and turned her favourite dish from rabbit to codfish. After that, he made her forget about the previous situation by putting another spell on her. Then the princess spent the rest of her life eating codfish and everyone lived happily ever after in the kingdom of Portugal.

By Catherine, Rita Silva and Lucas Sampaio