

ERASMUS TIME BANK

Definition: A Time Bank consists in a service in which people can help other people in exchange for favours, and it can be used to request help to other people.

The currency people use in that Bank is the hour (time). You will earn “hours” in your bank account if you help other students in things you’re good at. You will spend these hours requesting help in something, like studies... etc.

In Málaga we can find a Time Bank, but it isn’t for students, so we’re trying to implement it in schools.

Erasmus Time Bank

When we started the project to be selected for Erasmus+, we talked about an International Time Bank. Nowadays, we have a lot of different technologies to contact each other, so, why I can’t ask for help to an English student to learn English? That’s the reason we thought to implement an International Time Bank.
